A Tudor Low cupboard by Joost & Kiki for Moooi, $5,150 An ash frame holds fabric panels printed with a botanic pattern reminiscent of Henri Rousseau's paintings. Available in blue, red, and green (shown). moooi.com

Leather Report

The material of the moment in seating is leather.

Saddle leather offers the warmth and tactility of a natural hide, but its more rigid structure holds up better than its softer cousins. We've spied designers deploying the material in mass-market furniture, like Blu Dot's Toro Lounge chair; in bespoke pieces, like Brooklyn maker Friends & Family's update of the classic Danish sling chair ($3,200, below); and in high-end items, like Poltrona Frau's Nivola sofa ($8,100, bottom).

"The resurgence of green reflects the desire to integrate the natural and organic into our lives."
—Suchi Reddy, interior designer

B Ginger suspension lamp by Joan Gaspar for Marset, $775–$990 Layers of naturally peach-toned oak wood and paper compose the shade—inspired by drummer Ginger Baker—while a white interior reflects LED light. marset.com

C Oona carpets by Simon Legald for Normann Copenhagen, $310–$690 The handtufted New Zealand wool carpets are available in three sizes and three colors (all shown) and feature an accent stripe with a shorter pile height. normann-copenhagen.com

D Cosse sofa by Philippe Nigro for Ligne Roset, $4,225 Curl up in this sofa and you'll be cozy as a pea in a pod—the English translation of the French word cosse. The exposed frame comes in natural or anthracite-stained beech. ligne-roset-usa.com

E TS table small by GamFratesi for Gubi, $659 Marble tabletops have long been a furniture mainstay, but, in a twist, Danish-Italian designers GamFratesi used the exotic Verde Guatemala strain atop the glossy black base. gubi.dk
