solar reflections

Passing time on a flight, Rob Zinn noticed that as sunlight spilled through the windows, vibrant colors from the passengers' clothing were cast across the plane's curved white fuselage. That observation prompted the co-founder of modern furnishings source BlankBlank to do a little freelancing—ergo, his Concentric range of sconces and ceiling fixtures for Marset. Four aluminum discs, finished satin-white on the face, are covered in vinyl on their undersides. Turned off, the tones are subtly perceived. But once the LED light source is switched on, the effect is almost hypnotic, as the colors seem to vibrate. The three sizes come in three color combinations: neon Corona, warm Major, and cool Minor.
